WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

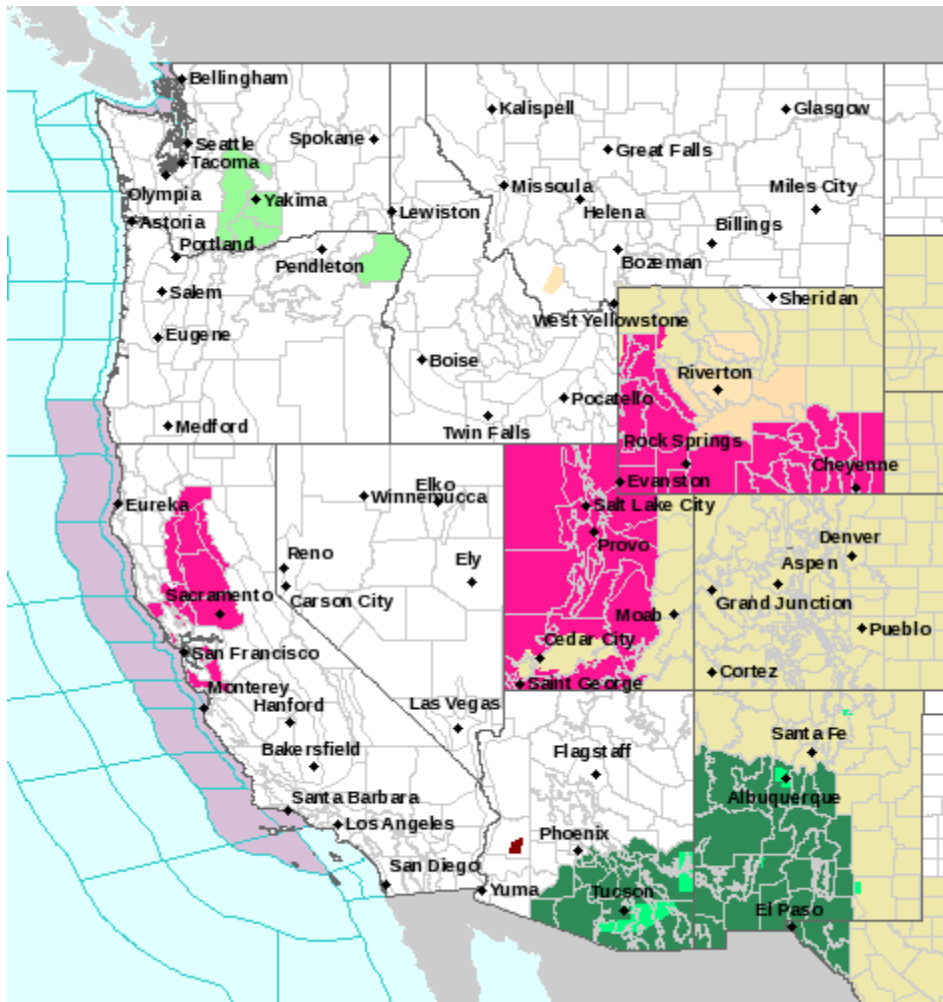

- High Risk Tonight and Thursday for Gusty N-Ne/Offshore Winds Sacramento Valley and Surrounding Foothills, Southern Mid Coast, and Santa Cruz/Diablo.
- A low pressure trough overhead this morning will move off to the east later today, leaving a weak and broad high pressure ridge overhead through Sunday. After a weak trough passes Monday high pressure will return.
- N-NE/Offshore wind pattern will develop tonight through midday Friday throughout the Sacramento Valley and surrounding foothills and on the mid and upper slopes throughout the Bay Area, including Napa, Sonoma, and Marin Counties to the north.
- Peak gusts will be 25-35 mph Thursday morning, with isolated wind-prone spots seeing slightly higher gusts. Winds late Thursday through early Friday will be significantly lighter, but still N-NE/Offshore.
- Poor relative humidity (RH) recovery, to only 15-35%, will be common tonight and Thursday night, and a few pockets of dry air on mid and upper slopes remaining Friday night. Minimum afternoon RH 8-18%, lowest in breezy areas.
- No precipitation is expected and temperatures will be above normal during the 7-day period.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

- A trough will continue to produce breezy and relatively cool weather today. Warmer and less windy weather will return Thursday and Friday before temperatures cool down slightly over the weekend.
- Northwest winds of 20-30 mph will continue across the Kern County Mountains into the Antelope Valley today.
- North winds of 20-30 mph along the I-5 Corridor and Santa Barbara County, mainly this morning.
- Temperatures will be below normal today with highs in the 70s in the mountains to the 80s in the valleys. But highs will reach the mid and upper 90s in the valleys by Friday before cooler, onshore flow returns this weekend.
- Minimum RH will be in the 8-12% range today above 4,000 feet. RH will gradually increase Thursday into the weekend and most areas will see minimums above 15%.
- A weak offshore wind event – the first one of the season – will be possible around the middle of next week.
